

Part C Phase 1—Proposed Changes to Section 370
(Clean)*Pressure to Breach the Fundamental Principles

370.1 This section addresses pressures that could result in a professional accountant taking actions that breach or cause others to breach the fundamental principles.

370.2 A professional accountant in business may face pressure that could create threats, for example, intimidation threats, to compliance with the fundamental principles when undertaking a professional activity. Pressure may be explicit or implicit. Pressure may come from within the organization, for example, from a colleague or superior, from an external individual or organization such as a vendor, customer or lender, or from meeting internal or external targets and expectations.

The professional accountant shall not allow pressure from others to result in a breach of the fundamental principles. The professional accountant also shall not place pressure on others that the professional accountant knows, or has reason to believe, would result in the other individuals breaching the fundamental principles.

370.3 Examples of pressure that could result in a breach of the fundamental principles include:

- Pressure related to conflicts of interest:
  - Pressure from a family member bidding to act as a vendor to the professional accountant's employing organization to select them over another prospective vendor.

The guidance in Section 310 is relevant.
- Pressure to influence presentation of information:
  - Pressure to report misleading financial results to meet investor, analyst or lender expectations.
  - Pressure from elected officials on public sector accountants to misrepresent programs or projects to voters.
  - Pressure from colleagues to misstate income, expenditure or rates of return to bias decision-making on capital projects and acquisitions.
  - Pressure from superiors to approve or process expenditures that are not legitimate business expenses.
  - Pressure to suppress internal audit reports containing adverse findings.

The guidance in Section 320 is relevant.
- Pressure to act without sufficient expertise or due care:
  - Pressure from superiors to inappropriately reduce the extent of work performed.
  - Pressure from superiors to perform a task without sufficient skills or training or within unrealistic deadlines.

The guidance in Section 330 is relevant.

- Pressure related to financial interests:
  - Pressure to manipulate performance indicators from superiors, colleagues or others, for example, those who may benefit from participation in compensation or incentive arrangements.

The guidance in Section 340 is relevant.

- Pressure related to inducements:
  - Pressure from others, either internal or external to the employing organization, to offer inducements to inappropriately influence the judgment or decision-making process of an individual or organization.
  - Pressure from colleagues to accept a bribe or other inducement, for example to accept inappropriate gifts or entertainment from potential vendors in a bidding process.

The guidance in Section 350 is relevant.

- Pressure related to non-compliance with laws and regulations:
  - Pressure to structure a transaction to evade tax.

The guidance in Section 360 is relevant.

370.4 In determining whether the pressure could result in a breach of the fundamental principles, the professional accountant may consider factors including:

- The intent of the individual who is exerting the pressure and the nature and significance of the pressure.
- The application of relevant laws, regulations, and professional standards to the circumstances.
- The culture and leadership of the employing organization including the extent to which it emphasizes the importance of ethical behavior and the expectation that employees will act in an ethical manner. For example, a corporate culture that tolerates unethical behavior may increase the likelihood that the pressure would result in a breach of the fundamental principles.
- Policies and procedures, if any, that the employing organization has established, such as ethics or human resources policies that address pressure.

In considering these and other factors, and being alert to the fundamental principle of confidentiality, the professional accountant in business may consult with:

- A colleague, superior, human resources personnel, or another professional accountant;
- Relevant professional or regulatory bodies or industry associations; or
- Legal counsel.

370.5 If the professional accountant determines that the pressure would result in a breach of the fundamental principles, the professional accountant may consider actions, including:

- Discussing the matter with the individual who is exerting the pressure to seek to resolve it.
- Discussing the matter with the professional accountant's supervisor, if the supervisor is not the individual exerting the pressure.
- Escalating the matter within the employing organization, for example, with higher levels of management, internal or external auditors, or those charged with governance, including independent directors and, when appropriate, explaining any consequential risks to the organization.
- Requesting restructuring or segregating certain responsibilities and duties so that the professional accountant is no longer involved with the individual or entity exerting the pressure, where doing so would eliminate the pressure to breach the fundamental principles. For example, if a professional accountant is pressured in relation to a conflict of interest, the pressure to breach the fundamental principles may be eliminated if the professional accountant avoids being associated with the matter creating the conflict, in addition to being replaced by another person who does not have that conflict of interest.
- Disclosing the matter in accordance with the employing organization's policies, including ethics and whistleblowing policies, using any established mechanism, such as a confidential ethics hotline.
- Consulting with legal counsel.

370.6 In situations where the professional accountant determines that the pressure to breach the fundamental principles has not been eliminated, the professional accountant shall:

- Decline to undertake or discontinue the professional activity that would result in a breach of the fundamental principles; and
- Consider resigning from the employing organization.

The professional accountant is also encouraged to document the facts, the communications, the courses of action considered, the parties with whom these matters were discussed, and how the matter was addressed.